Freecycle & Donate Drop Log

Proof that the bags really left the house. Morale fuel.

Why log it?

Out-of-sight bags have a sneaky habit of becoming part of the car. One line per bag closes the loop: where it went, when, and whether you'll go back. Watching this page fill up is half the fun of decluttering — it is a receipt for space you bought back.

Drop log

DATE	WHAT (BAG/BOX/ BULK)	# BAGS	WENT TO (CHARITY, FREECYCLE, FRIEND...)	METHOD	TAX RECEIPT?	NOTES / WHO RECEIVED

Method cheat sheet

- [ ] Donate bins/shops — fastest; check accepted lists first
  Tip: some shops take textiles even when stained.
- [ ] Charity pickups — book one week ahead and let the date force the deadline
- [ ] Freecycle / Buy Nothing — post with a photo, porch pickup, 24 h reply window
  Great for odd items (leg clamp? fish tank stand?).
- [ ] Direct handoff — the friend/neighbor who'd genuinely like it
- [ ] Specialty homes — books to little libraries, towels to animal shelters, eyeglasses to collection boxes
- [ ] Recycle last — electronics, batteries, paint have drop-off points; they're the last resort, not the first bin

Bag go-line checklist

- [ ] Bag is labeled — contents in marker on tape
- [ ] Nothing you re-looked at is in there
- [ ] No one saw it and wants it first
- [ ] Destination decided, not “the car”
- [ ] Drop date on the calendar
- [ ] Log line ready to fill in after drop

> Bag rule
> A bag that waits more than 7 days gets dropped at the fastest destination, not the best one. Momentum beats optimization.

Rally running total

TOTALS	THIS WEEK	MONTH	SEASON
Boxes/bags out
Items given away
Sold (and where)
Saved receipts ($)
Shelves cleared

A season of giving is worth more than a shed full of “someday.” Keep this sheet until the rally totals stop growing — that pause is your proof the whole house finally breathes.